

159656	1	They've made me realize that we should cherish our relationships with everyone in our lives because we'll never know when they could be gone.
159656	1	none
159656	1	The events made going back to school very difficult. I felt like I did not have enough time to recover from the shock and fear for my family's lives before I was expected to function as a student.
159656	1	People talked to others that they wouldn't ordinarily talk to because they wanted to discuss it all the time...this lasted for about one week.
159656	1	Not very much at all.
159656	1	I had to comfort a couple of people that were pretty shaken up after the incident. I had to spend a little extra time with them and got to know them more personally.
159656	1	those less fortunate. In my case, I would love to open a creative arts institution for the poor inner city children of America, starting in my hometown: New Orleans. Now, I am more than ever determined to
159656	4	No big effects on my college experience.
159656	4	9/11 did not really affect my college experience, but without a doubt made me realize how important my family is to me.
159656	4	none
159656	4	no comment
159656	4	interest in them has always been high. It did not change because of what happened. It was nice to see the campus pull together during those times, and to hear professors talk about the events from their perspectives. That academic performance. I have, however, decreased my effort in academia because I have found that students with a G.P.A lower than mine are gettin jobs and I am not.
159656	4	being informed of worldwide current events
159656	4	It got me into a lot of trouble because it stressed me out for a little while and I could focus on my school work. But now things are a little better.
159656	4	none